

Incredible!

CREEPED-OUT CREATURES

Humans aren't the only ones to feel afraid—animals also get scared. Check out some of the interesting (and icky!) ways animals react when they're frightened.

BY ERIN SILVER

EEK!

FULMAR CHICKS

WHAT THEY'RE AFRAID OF:

Birds, rats, squirrels, and foxes

Baby fulmar birds look like fluffy little bundles of cuteness, but when they're attacked, they shoot oily orange vomit at predators. This vomit is so sticky it can glue a predatory bird's feathers together, making it unable to fly. And fulmar birds have another defensive advantage: they're stinky! If you catch a whiff, you might throw up yourself. They smell like a combination of dirty diapers, rotten eggs, and spoiled cabbage. Yuck!

